Manager's Comments

Equity

The local market continues to be bullish, led by huge foreign inflows from funds that remain very underweight on Malaysia. Foreign inflows continue to trend higher with net inflows amounting to RM5.7bn for 1Q17 and RM4.4bn in March itself. Given that our 1,750 target for the FBMKLCI has been reached, we have raised our year-end target to 1,820-1,850. The trend remains bullish with local selling well-absorbed by foreign buying. We anticipate earnings upgrades to continue to drive the market higher.

We continue to overweight cyclical sectors like oil & gas, banks, consumer discretionary and tourism related-companies. GLC restructuring and e-commerce companies remain core holdings in our portfolios.

Fixed Income

We see continued risk and volatility to come from uncertainties with regards to the tightening by the US Fed, future US policies/rhetoric under Donald Trump and political developments in the Eurozone. Donald Trump's health care bill failure has put doubts in the market on the re-inflation trade. Nonetheless, there is a risk that the Fed may hike by another 2 more times in 2017 due to the recent strong economic numbers.

Malaysia's inflation surged to 4.5% in February 2017, more than expected. Nevertheless we expect BNM to maintain the OPR at current levels this year to support economic growth coupled with the prospect of an early general election. The possibility of Malaysia election in 2017 that may add further to volatility if BN is seen to have a lower probability of winning. Despite the strengthening of the MYR in recent months, foreign sentiments remain poor. We expect MGS to remain supported by local institutional players.

RM10.5 billion MGS matured in March and there will be no maturities until June. The next large maturity of MGS/MGII will be during the August to November period with a total of RM44.5 billion worth of maturities.

We expect foreign outflows in MGS to continue. Foreigners are currently underweight the Malaysian market which may put a cap on large rallies and sell offs. Due to limited foreign inflow in the near term, we expect that local investors will continue to be the main support for the MGS. Nevertheless local investors' preference is currently for corporate bonds over MGS, with MGS selling off along the curve.

Corporate bond spreads generally tightened over March. With a concentration of high grade issuances coming to market there may be potential spread widening. However, we expect the sentiment for the corporate bond market to be well supported as liquidity is still ample in the market, with local investors continuing to put money to work in April. Nevertheless, the 2017 auction calendar for government issuances poses a steepening risk with the focus on long-tenor issuances, which could eventually widen corporate bond spreads due to the huge incoming supply.

In view of the large supply of corporate bonds in the pipeline, we will raise cash by taking profit on existing holdings. We are overweight corporate bonds and we will participate in primary issuances in the corporate bond space that offer attractive spreads. We will participate in new benchmark government auctions opportunistically where we see value. Nonetheless, we remain aware of rising risks of rating downgrades and defaults in the credit market and will overweight fundamentals in our portfolio activities.
