March 2018

Allianz Life Global High Payout Fund

Manager's Comment

Portfolio Highlights

The Fund registered loss of -4.75% in March, underperforming the MSCI World which was down -2.96%.

What helped

- The Fund could slightly outperform global equity markets as measured by MSCI World Index.
- In a weak market environment, the covered call overwriting as well as the defensive bias of the equity strategy both contributed positively to fund performance.

What hurt

- The Fund lagged its customized benchmark.

Market Review & Outlook

- Global equities continued on a downward trend in March. Sentiment was undermined by escalating fears of a global trade war and heightened geopolitical tensions following the poisoning of a former spy on British soil. All regions recorded negative returns, with US and Asian equities declining the most.
- US equities added to the losses recorded in February, with President Trump's decision to impose tariffs on steel and aluminium imports sparking a sell-off, which gathered pace when the administration announced a 25% tariff on USD 60 billion of imports from China. In addition, US market sentiment was dampened by a raft of changes in the White House, with moderate voices replaced by more nationalistic ones.
- Eurozone equities retreated (in EUR terms) alongside their global peers, albeit more modestly. Italy's elections resulted in no outright winner, with populist, anti-EU parties gathering the most votes and the pro-EU, centre-left coalition demoted to a distant third place. Both the Five Star Movement and the Northern League claimed sufficient support to form a coalition government.
- Even though the global economic data have improved slightly, the figures for key industrial regions such as the US, the euro area and Japan recently weakened. The global economy appears to be moving towards the next stage of the current cycle. During this late-cycle reflation phase, the global economy will probably continue to grow, but the momentum will not accelerate further. US growth and inflation forecasts for 2018 have been raised again.
